A GENERATION OF FILIBUSTERING.

The New York Times of Wednesday had an article on the death of the river and harbor bill which pointed its moral with a reference that was as unfortunate as it was unjust. Senator Clark, with the experience of newness, tried the time-worn expedient of delaying legislation by the unsparring use of that senatorial courtesy which permits a senator to make orations long after the intoxication of his own verbosity has subsided into the dreary dullness of senseless reiteration that may not be stopped until Congress adjourns. However, the honorable member of copper mines and coppered conscience killed the river and harbor bill. There was nothing new or original in the plan, though the vigor of its execution might deserve commendation, and yet the New York Times, despite the fact that it has stood as an unwavering exponent of the principles and traditions of the Democratic party, goes out of its way to ding an unworthy jibe at "a Senator from Kentucky, a leather-lunged statesman, set on fire presumably of Bourbon, who used to be put up by the Democratic minority to talk when there was any object to be secured by the mere lapse of time."

There is no paper in the North that should know better the conditions of that time, a generation ago, than the New York Times. It was no desire to act as conscious and willful obstructionists that drove the Democrats to take refuge in such measures. It was rather from a statesmanlike and patriotic wish to preserve the integrity of a nation, which the malignant hatred and unreasoning venom of the Republican party was blindly seeking to destroy, that the Democrats of the North and South combined in a desperate effort to delay legislation that they were powerless to prevent.

Samuel J. Tilden, Thomas F. Bayard, Allen G. Thurman and Horatio Seymour were Northern men and patriots, and yet they and their followers alike revolted at the high-handed and despotic measures of the Republican party no less in its attempt to impeach Johnson for carrying out Lincoln's idea of reconstruction than for the ruthless and unwise manner in which it sought to give itself a perpetual lease on power by the creation of a black party in the South.

The homogeneity of our people, the oneness of our national aims and destiny, the absolute need for giving the minority a fair representation and the desire to head instead of widening the breach between the sections, were the causes that brought about the revival of the Democratic spirit throughout the land and election of Tilden in 1876.

The men who pointed out whether the unbridled power of the Republicans was tending, and fought with long-winded speeches to prevent its accomplishment, are deserving of the gratitude of a reunited country that has suffered enough from the aftermath of the Republican carnival from 1865 to 1876 to thank God that there are no additional wrongs to be righted or mistakes to be rectified.

WHY AN EARLY PRIMARY.

We are glad to see that the Democratic candidates in Richmond for the Constitutional Convention have agreed not to spend any money in making their canvass before the primary election. We wish that they would also agree not to make any personal canvass among the people, but simply publish their cards to the public, making known their views on the various questions to come before the convention, and then let the voters make their selection without solicitation from any. By such a course the best men would be selected.

But this will not be done. Where one candidate solicits, others feel that they must also solicit, and therefore, we are in favor of an early primary, so that there may be as little canvassing as possible. The various candidates will not have time, even if they have the inclination to give close study to the questions which will come before the convention until after the primary election shall have been held and the delegates nominated. We think, therefore, that the primary should be held at the earliest practicable moment and the selections made so that those who are to represent us in the convention may have plenty of time before the convention meets to prepare themselves thoroughly for the work. The delegates should study the principles of organic law and constitutional government, they should carefully read the history of constitutional conventions, and especially should they study the debates before the Virginia Convention of 1829 and other conventions which followed. But that is not enough. They should also take up the latest constitutions of the most progressive States in the Union, and so be prepared to give Virginia a Constitution which shall be in keeping with the spirit and progress of the age. Our present system of government is in some respects antiquated and not suited to these times. We believe that it would be worth a great deal to the material interests of Virginia if our new Constitution should prove to be a thoroughly up-to-date document.

We say that the delegates ought to begin to study all these questions long before the convention meets, and hence we think that it will be better to elect the delegates as soon as practicable.

RIVER AND HARBOR JOBBERY.

The Baltimore American says that the defeat of the river and harbor appropriation bill should serve as a warning to all future Congresses, as the bill was unquestionably killed by abuse, and the spirit displayed in the treatment of it during the closing hours of Congress shows conclusively that such gigantic jobs have no hope of success. The American points out that the bill is in many of its features admirable and commendable, but that the legitimate items were outnumbered and over-topped as to amount by the illegitimate ones. "These latter," it goes on, "were included in the bill not because the rivers and harbors needed improvement, but because members of Congress leagued themselves together for the purpose of requiring the government to maintain their political fences. An instance of this illegitimacy was expatiated upon by Senator Carter while engaged in the task of talking the bill to death. One item appropriated $4,000,000 for the improvement of a heretofore unimproved river, and a good portion of the sum was to be expended for digging artesian wells to supply the river with water and to give a great dam, which was also provided for, something to do. These wells were absolutely unnecessary, because in the summer time the river dried up entirely. This is but one sample of the perniciousness of this scheme to mulct the government under guise of public improvement. The bill teemed with other like cases, whose spurious nature was so palpable as to be indefensible. Thus weighted down, the defeat of the bill was inevitable."

That was the result of log-rolling. Each and every member of Congress goes in to get all that he can for the section which he represents, for he knows that it will help him with his constituency to secure an appropriation from the government. It is not the good that will do to the member who gets the appropriation.

Several years ago a Virginia Congressman secured an appropriation to improve a mountain stream in his district, which was in no sense navigable and which never bore on its bosom any sort of craft other than canoes and batteaux. This appropriation was a standing joke all through the district and the member himself laughed about it, but the money had been appropriated and it was actually expended in digging rocks out of the river here and there and improving the "channel." Of course, the money was wasted so far as any advantage to navigation went, but the man who received the contract for doing the work and the laborers who worked for him got the money and put it into their pockets and gave the Congressman all praise.

There is more or less jobbery of this character in every river and harbor bill, and that is why it is possible for one senator to talk such a bill to death. The bill could not stand on its merits. There were more honest items in the bill, but there were also many dishonest items, and as it too often happens in this world the good had to suffer for the evil.

The people of Norfolk and Portsmouth are "protesting" against the removal of the Seaboard Air Line general offices, and threats are indulged in. "The matter was the general topic of conversation in business circles," says the Virginian-Pilot, "and a general feeling of resentment against the Seaboard is apparent. The merchants state that they have turned to the Seaboard an immense amount of freight, because they considered it a 'home road' while, if the threatened removal actually occurs, they will transfer to other lines every dollar of business possible."

"That seems to us to be 'child talk.'" The Seaboard authorities will not remove the offices and shops unless it be to the interest of the company to do so, and if such removal is to the interest of the company, the tidewater people have no reasonable ground for "protesting."

CURRENT TOPICS.

In connection with the Confederate Reunion, soon to be held in that city, the Memphis Commercial Appeal reports that "from almost every point in the Southern country the Confederate veterans are beginning to make preparations to visit this city during the encampment. It seems to be the almost universal desire to make of the coming meeting the largest and most successful in the history of the organization. A wave of enthusiasm seems to have seized the old warriors, and scarcely a day passes when some bivouac does not hold a meeting and declare its intentions of coming to the city in force."

Miss Susan B. Anthony may be something of a crank herself in some respects, but we agree with the Philadelphia Press that she "never spoke a truer and more timely word than when she told the women of Kansas that in every one of the cities of that State they have the right to vote for municipal officers from Mayor down, the same as men, and that if there are officials in these cities who are incompetent and who refuse to do their duty and enforce the prohibitory law, the women are equally responsible with the men."

The Ohio State Journal finds a lesson for Americans in the popularity of the Chinese minister to this country, Mr. Wu Ting Fang. "The minister would never have made a very wide impression upon the people of this country," it says, "if he had not spoken and understood the English language. This argues that we ought to select diplomatic agents, other things being fairly equal, who are acquainted with the language and in a degree with the literature of the countries to which they are sent. This is one of the secrets of the success of our ambassador to Germany, Hon. Andrew D. White. General Horace Porter at Paris is similarly equipped."

In a recent address Professor T. P. Lonsbrough, professor of English in Yale University, spoke a word in defense of the much-abused "newspaper English." In discussing the influence at work for the corruption of our language, the Yale professor said:

"It is hard to see why the newspaper should be selected as the special agent that is bringing about the general ruin that is always impending. Newspaper writing is subject to conditions which tend to impair excellence. What is produced is produced to meet the want of the moment. Little or no time can be allowed for examination or revision. The writers connected with the more important journals are usually a picked body of men. They are invariably under an influence which tends to promote a perspicacity and energy of expression. As a class they are strongly partisan. Accordingly they are almost always in a state of wrath against something or somebody, and consequently they write in earnest. In education and ability newspaper men are as a class far superior to those who set out to be their critics and censors."

AFTERMATH.

Owing to an unfortunate entanglement of interests, this distracted country will have to get along without vice-admirals for a further indefinite period.

In the presumable absence of other matters for disagreement in opinion, certain Free Baptists in New Hampshire are much agitated over the pork eating issue.

"They are the warmest things in the bunch," admirably exclaimed the President at the West Point cadets gallantly swung past the reviewing stand. "Yes, they're genuine Tabasco sauce," replied Mr. Cortelyou, and let it go at that.

The Chicago Chronicle eagerly observes that the Evanston dominion who has told his congregation that local option is superior to prohibition as a temperance resource may as well prepare to move. In temperance politics there is no room for the man who recommends the practice over the impossible.

A Binghamton (N. Y.) theosophist has eloped with his wife's grandmother, of Fayette, Ga., because he recognized in her soul his sweetheart of several centuries ago. If that's the kind of taste theosophy induces in the mind of a believer, many will doubtless beg to be excused.

PERSONAL AND CRITICAL.

The original "Little Lord Fauntleroy" is doing news paper work in Washington, and he is said to be not the same—not the same.

A report has it that Lieutenant Hobson is engaged to marry a New York girl, and to make the affair romantic the parents of the hero object.

If the American cup defenders call our boat the Independence, Sir Thomas Lipton may call the challenger George III., and precipitate the war of 1776 over again.

The Boston Herald says one of Mr. Evaris' best mottos was his description of one of President Hayes' state dinners at which he said "the water flowed like champagne."

According to the Topeka Journal, the circus man who claims to have engaged Mrs. Nation for the coming season says the sale of red lemonade will not be permitted.

Mr. Roosevelt does not wish to be called "Governor," or "Mr. Vice-President," but just "Colonel Roosevelt." "I earned my own colonelcy," he adds, "the other things came to me." If our memory serves he was given the title before his lonely experience "in Cuba."

Of Minister Wu Ting Fang's recent visit to St. Louis one newspaper man says: "He's at once the easiest and hardest person to interview I ever met. Why, he seemed to do all the talking himself, and then, when you get through, you're apt to find that he's been questioning you all the time and you've got no copy at all."

"Miss Johnston," authoress of "To Have and to Hold," says a reader of the Philadelphia Telegraph, who knows her personally, "is the frailest, delicatest little lady imaginable. Far from being the dashing creature one would think from reading her novel, she looks as if she had not strength or energy to put her thoughts on paper. She told me that her methods of work are somewhat peculiar. She prefers to begin to write at 11 o'clock in the evening, when everything about her is still and there are no discordant noises to distract her attention. She likes to do all the talking herself, and on moonlight nights seated at a window through which the moonlight is streaming."

AN ACCIDENT ON THE PIER.

Conflicting Statements in Regard to a Shooting Affray.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

NEWPORT NEWS, VA., March 6.—Mrs. Eliza Beggs entered suit in the clerk's office of the Corporation Court this morning against the Citizens' Railway, Light and Power Company for $2,500 damages for injuries alleged to have been caused through the negligence of the company or its employees in allowing the tracks to extend up above the ground, she claiming to have stumbled over them and broke her ankle and to have received other serious and permanent injuries.

Mr. Ford's head struck one of the rails and he received a bad scalp wound. The negro's head struck the other rail and he was unconscious for half an hour. There was no change to-day in the coal handlers' strike situation. The union trimmers are still out. The non-union men are at work. Nothing more has been heard of the threat of the International Longshoremen's Union to call out its men.

All of the Chinamen who were arrested Sunday night in the alleged joint raid by police were discharged to-day by Justice Brown, who said there was no evidence to sustain any of the charges. A mysterious shooting affray occurred last night in Phoebus. John W. Berfield was shot in the hand and there are conflicting stories as to who did the shooting. He claims that it was done by Sergeant R. H. McGee, of the Fourth Artillery, stationed at Fort Monroe, while he with others shot her husband in self-defense. Berfield does not live with the woman and the trouble is said to have originated on her account. McGee gave himself up for trial.

SENT TO GRAND JURY.

Negroes Must Answer the Charge of Stealing Chickens.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

WINCHESTER, VA., March 6.—The City Council and the Winchester Gas and Electric Light Company are at odds regarding the letting of a contract for the Rouss City Hall. The Council last night turned down a proposition made by the company, and some trouble in making an agreement is expected.

Green Russell, William and Robert Poague and Samuel Page, the Clarke county negroes arrested here for stealing a large number of chickens and turkeys, were sent to the grand jury by Justice Crockett at Berryville to-day. Two indictments will probably be made.

FRESH GOSSIP FROM GOTHAM

Faro Banks Now Opening in Broadway Hotels.

MAY IMITATE MRS. NATION.

Minister and His Wife in Brooklyn Contemplate a Raid With Axes on the Saloons—Burglaries Numerous.

NEW YORK, March 6.—Lewis Nixon, recently chairman of the defunct Tammany Anti-Vice Committee, maintains his enthusiastic interest in the effort to purify the city and drive the gambling combination out of business. It has been upon information furnished by Mr. Nixon that several recent police raids have been made, including one which was made yesterday afternoon upon an alleged pool room at No. 6 Front Street by Deputy Chief Cortright.

Disgusted with the conditions that have so long existed in the Tenderloin precinct to the disgrace of the entire city, Commissioner Murphy has decided to transfer Captain Thomas from the West Thirtieth Street Police Station. The change will be made as soon as a proper successor for Captain Thomas can be decided upon. An unfounded rumor which was widely circulated yesterday was to the effect that Captain Chapman would be returned to his old command in the Tenderloin. Commissioner Murphy denies that he has seriously thought of recalling the hero of the Seely dinner raid.

FARO IN HOTELS NOW. Completely routed by the vigor of the campaign that has been waged against them, the gamblers are at a loss to define their present position in New York. Politicians who have protected them in the past and that operations may soon be resumed, but almost without exception the old gambling houses are closed. Faro games are quietly running in several Broadway hotels that will accept heavy revenue and take the chance of the notoriety that will follow a raid.

POLY is now to be struck a heavy blow. Commissioner Murphy asserts that he will proceed with great vigor against the policy gamblers.

MAY EMULATE MRS. NATION. In the Vanderveer Park section of Brooklyn a man and a woman are praying and waiting for divine guidance as to whether they shall emulate Mrs. Nation in Kansas and go about the historic old subdivision of Brooklyn with axes, smashing saloons in the great fight against the sale of intoxicants.

George H. Gray, pastor of the Vanderveer Park Methodist Episcopal Church, and the woman is his wife. At a meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union held in the Flatbush Congregational Church on Monday, where Mrs. Nation was enthusiastically welcomed, the Rev. Mr. Gray said:

"It was wishing the other day that Mrs. Nation was my mother, and that I was her son and could shoulder an axe and break up the saloons. I think it is time we should do something—even shoulder an axe, if necessary, and if my wife will undertake any work with her, and if she goes to jail I will go there, too. I have seen the dark side of this question and have not visited the jail for twenty-five years without seeing there the misery which has been caused by drink."

When Mr. Gray had finished speaking every one looked at his wife. Mrs. Gray is president of one of the local unions, and she did not hesitate a moment, but, rising, said:

"If it is necessary, and there is that work to do, we will start out with the axe. I ask for prayers that I may do whatever the Lord calls me to do."

Neither the Rev. Mr. Gray nor his wife would discuss their plans last night beyond saying that they would cheerfully undertake any work to which they might be called for the good of the cause.

MUCH importance is attached by the members of the West-End Association to the meeting of the Committee on Legislation and Schools, to be held in the office of its chairman, John C. Coleman, No. 100 Broadway, on Friday afternoon next. On that occasion will be determined what action will be taken upon proposals made by one member that the Department of Buildings is using its power to bring business to one firm in this city, and, furthermore, that, by threats of raising his business prospects, the department has no intention of being grateful, however, for the charges that he was practically compelled to write to Commissioner Brady saying he was mistaken when he formulated them.

One William Card, now a prisoner on a charge of burglary, has a very serious arm-to-day, for he was interrupted while busily at work Monday night, by a Board of Health physician, who would not go away until he had properly vaccinated him. The Health Department is so strict these days that not even prospective candidates for Sing Sing are permitted to go into an infected house unless they are properly protected against the ravages of disease, instead of being grateful, however, for the delicate attention which he received, Card's now saying uncompromising things about officials physicians.

Flat thieves furnished Brooklyn with much excitement yesterday afternoon. In one instance a man was caught at work when they attempted to escape. She was knocked down. The thieves fled. She followed, and after a hot chase, in which a number of citizens joined, the intruder was caught. In a second case a man who was following a fleeing thief who had just robbed a flat was fired at four times by the thief, who was later caught by a policeman. The man escaped injury, the thief's bullets going wide of their mark.

Two men were found to have a quantity of valuable jewelry in their possession. Held up in her home by a robber who threatened her with a revolver close to her head, Mrs. David E. Matthews, a minister's wife, of West Hoboken, N. J., was so terrorized by the thief that she fainted while attempting to carry out the man's orders. She remained unconscious until the robbery was over. Monday afternoon, and she is still prostrated as a result of the shock.

RESULT OF CARTER'S TONGUE.

Boats Will Be Tied Up and Men Thrown Out of Employment.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

WILMINGTON, N. C., March 6.—As a result of Senator Carter's talking the river and harbor bill to death between seventy-five and one hundred men at Wilmington, Newbern, and other places along North Carolina coast will be thrown out of employment. Formerly employed men have been so nearly exhausted that what is left will be reserved purely for emergency purposes.

Only a few men, for service as caretakers, will be retained.

INNOCENT YET GUILTY.

Captain Violates the Revised Statutes and His Vessel Is Forfeited.

(Special Dispatch to The Times.)

NORFOLK, VA., March 6.—Queer complications have arisen because of the failure of Captain Rabbidge, commanding the American barkentine Stephen G. Hart, and some customs officials, to inform themselves regarding certain regulations. The barkentine sailed from the United States to Porto Rico and thence to Turk's Island, where she took on a cargo of salt and sailed for Providence, R. I. She sprung a leak in the late storm and put in here for harbor.

When she reported at the custom house, the collector found she had only a coasting license, while she was carrying cargo from a foreign port. This violation of Section 447 of the Revised Statutes subjects her and her cargo to forfeiture. The collector reported her to the Secretary of the Treasury and awaits his action.

Her captain is clearly innocent of intent to violate the law, since he was apparently at Porto Rico, allowed to clear for Turk's Island under the papers he carries now. He says he was not told by the Porto Rican collector that his papers were irregular.

THE CAMPERDOWN ASHORE.

Wreckers Think She Can Be Fleeted Without Injury.

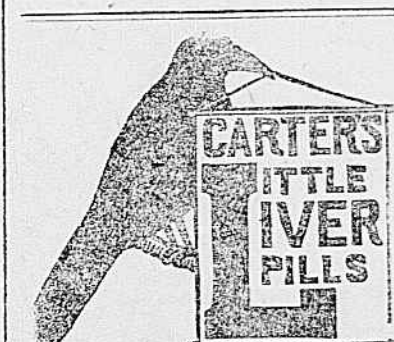

(By Associated Press.)

NORFOLK, VA., March 6.—A telegram received here to-day reported the British steamer Camperdown, ashore at Point Lookout, near Beaufort, N. C., apparently all right this morning, although hard ashore. She has no water in her. The wrecking tug William Coley arrived alongside yesterday evening and the barge John Hagerday was expected to-day to begin hoisting of a portion of the steamer's cargo of sugar.

The wreckers say she will probably be floated unimpaired. A strong northwest wind has been blowing at Point Lookout all day.
